“As we are permanently connected to our phones, constantly staring at digitally and increasingly artificially mediated images, Lynn has been inviting us to think critically about the gendered ways in which we interact with technology since the 1960s. This work is the perfect encapsulation of Lynn’s wide-ranging oeuvre. I especially love works that are a commitment to live with, and the material requirements of maintaining it. With Los Angeles’s particular obsession with anti-aging, I hope that this work stays local.”
