POTTS

View of | "I Wish to Communicate With You: Corita Kent & Matt Keegan" at POTTs, Los Angeles.

The late Corita Kent, the radical former nun and Pop Conceptualist, designed 26 flags in 1968, one for each letter of the alphabet, all based on maritime signals. The sassy works, which blur cultural references (Book of Revelation meets Winnie the Pooh), currently hang at POTTs, a collectively run space that's also showing works by Matt Keegan. His paper cut-outs, also done in primary colors, act like punctuation marks on Kent's alphabet.

The space is run by six collaborators out of a former plumbing shop (also called POTTs) and combines exhibitions of new art with rediscoveries of older work. Exhibition design is perhaps the group's forte, and since their tall, wide windows open onto the street, their shows are eye candy to passerby.

POTTs is at 2130 Valley Boulevard, Alhambra.

"I Wish to Communicate With You: Corita Kent & Matt Keegan" is on view through April 14.
